The Roman Empire's impact on Britain

Building on Knowledge and Skills

Just like the Greeks, evidence of the Romans is all around us, for example if you were to look at the edge of a £1 coin, you would see a phrase in Latin, the language of the Romans. The Romans introduced many things to Britain which are still important to us today. In maths in Year 4, you will learn about Roman numerals and the Roman calendar we use today. When studying Ancient Greece, you will have learned that many words that you will say, read and write originate from other times in history. Some of place names come from Roman times, such as London, which was called Londinium by the Romans. The Greeks worshipped many gods, and so did the Romans, who had lots of different gods and goddesses. There were gods for almost everything, like thunder, love, war, wisdom and even the sewer in Rome. The Anglo-Saxons were the next people to rule Britain, who you will learn about in Upper Key Stage 2. The Romans eventually conquered the Greeks,

Quick Summary

The story of how a small village grew to become one of the largest empires the world has ever seen stretches over centuries. At its most powerful, the Roman Empire spread across Europe, parts of North Africa and the Middle East. Its army was one of the most organised and skilful ever created. Romans took their technology, art and beliefs with them and had a significant effect on the culture and society of every land they conquered. However, the Romans faced struggles at home, with civil war and political turmoil. By the end of the fifth century, they had been attacked on several different frontiers and were finding it difficult to hold their vast empire together. As a consequence, the Western Roman Empire finally came to an end in 476 CE.

Where in the world was the Roman Empire?

How did the culture or beliefs of the Romans impact on Britain?

Describe the attempts by the Romans to invade Britain and how they were resisted.

What impact did the Romans have on Britain?

What evidence is there of this that remains today?

Who Were the Romans?

Myths (stories told to explain customs and beliefs) were a significant part of Roman life. There is even a myth to explain how the city of Rome was founded. It tells the tale of two brothers Romulus and Remus.

The Romans had many rulers, we will learn about Julius Caesar, who tried to invade Britain.

Rome is the capital city of modern-day Italy. 2,000 years ago, it was the city at the centre of the Roman Empire. The Roman Empire is the name used for the land that was controlled by the Romans. This includes parts of Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. Click on the map above to use Google Earth to see Rome's modern-day location.

Like many empires, the Romans were always looking for other regions to conquer. The Romans invented new ways of fighting and were always looking to improve their military. As a consequence, they won more and more territory and set their sights beyond Italy. At its peak the Romans ruled over 45 million people.

Why Were They So Powerful?

Ancient Rome's success depended on its ability to win battles against invaders and neighbouring armies.

The early Romans also made treaties (agreements) with neighbours and other city-states until, with their powerful, well-trained army, they became the undisputed rulers of Italy.

By expanding their territory, they were able to increase the money they received from tributes (taxes). Military power also meant the Romans controlled the significant, valuable trade routes that ran across and around the Mediterranean Sea. Having a reliable and capable army was important when building an empire, but it was trade (exchanging, buying and selling goods) that made the Roman Empire powerful and prosperous, vast amounts of money were made importing and exporting goods.

The Romans were a group of people who were named after the important city of Rome. However, many soldiers fighting in the Roman army did not come from Rome itself. Instead, they came from one of the many countries which were part of the Roman Empire. The Roman army became multicultural.

Roman Britain

The Romans attempted to invade Britain 3 times. Click here to find out more.

(1) Led by the famous military commander Julius Caesar, the Roman army first tried to invade Britain in 55 and 54 BCE. The attempt in 55 BCE failed because of bad weather.

(2) A year later the Romans had some success, but only conquered the southern Celtic tribes. They collected tributes (taxes) but made no major attempts to expand their territories.

(3) The Romans were back almost 100 years later in 43 CE under the command of Emperor Claudius. Claudius brought a much larger army which landed in Kent, on the south coast of England. The Romans travelled as far as modern-day Scotland but were unable to keep this area under control, building a wall to keep the northernmost tribes out. Following the successful conquest of much of Britain, the Romans stayed in Britain until 410 CE.

Boudicca

The Roman army was very powerful and despite resistance from many British tribes, came to control most of England and Wales by about 100 CE. One of the most famous rebellions of this time was led by Queen Boudicca, the leader of the Iceni tribe. She led a huge army against the Romans in the cities of Colchester, London and St Albans. Her army was finally defeated by a skilful and well-trained group of 1,200 Roman soldiers who defeated almost 80,000 men.

The Romans built one of the most famous set of defences in history: Hadrian's Wall. In 122CE Emperor Hadrian, ordered a great wall, made up of 15 forts, to be built to separate Roman Britain from Scotland. The remains of many of these forts can still be seen today.

Roman Impact on Britain

In AD410, the Roman Emperor Honorius sent a goodbye letter to the people of Britain. He wrote, "fight bravely and defend your lives . . . you are on your own now". The city of Rome was under attack and the empire was falling apart, so the Romans had to leave to take care of matters back home. The Romans brought significant changes to Britain. They built over 10,000 miles of roads and built houses, forts and temples from stone rather than wood.

Even after they were gone, the Romans left their mark all over the country. They gave us new towns, plants, animals, a new religion, the census a calendar, laws and the legal system and ways of reading and counting. Even the word 'Britain' comes from the Romans.

Remains of mosaics, pottery, jewellery and coins help to explain the structure of society and give details of the beliefs of the early Romans. Thanks to the engineering and architectural skills of the Romans, ancient buildings which were built thousands of years ago from concrete, are a significant source of historical evidence that survive to this day.

Before the Romans came, very few people could read or write in Britain. Instead, information was passed on from person to person by word of mouth. The Romans wrote down their history, literature and laws. Their language was Latin, and people in Britain began using it too. Some words and phrases we use today came from Latin, e.g. 'exit' means 'he or she goes out' and 'pedestrian' which means 'going on foot'.
